Fleet Management Program Can Save 15% in First Year!

DRIVING FORCE is always looking for new and better ways to serve our customers. Now we're working on saving our corporate customers headaches as well as money.

In September 2009, research and preparations began in the development of a fully integrated fleet management program that could add real value for our customers. Our research has included working with selected companies to evaluate their vehicle fleets and to determine what benefits they would extract from the fleet management program. This process includes gathering and analyzing vehicle data, delivering customized reports, and gathering feedback in order to find out which parts of the program offer the most value.

This program will provide fleet management services for a variety of customers including the small- to medium-sized fleets (5 to 50 vehicles). It is being designed as a third party service that will potentially save companies a significant amount of money. This customized program centres on one-on-one consultation to fit each customer's particular needs. Experts in each stage of the process will be available to the customer on an ongoing basis.

"... statistics show that a fleet program that is customized to your business typically reduces annual fuel costs by 15%."

The fleet management program is composed of five parts. Customers are free to choose which services they require, whether it's only one part or the entire program.

1. Operational costs and controls
Fuel card: tracks fuel purchases; flags issues related to improper fuel grades and excessive fuel purchases; and tracks odometer readings and fuel economy.
2. Fleet maintenance (in conjunction with vendor partners)
Preventative maintenance; recall notices; tracking expenses.
3. Asset management
Consulting services: valuation of the existing fleet; expert advice on the right time to buy and sell; pricing.
4. Regulatory services
Vehicle inspections; licenses; insurance requirements.
5. Accident services
Driver abstract; driver education; risk management; accident reporting; guidance and assistance in settling claims.

In order to run its fleet at maximum efficiency, a company must prioritize and maintain the processes that comprise the elements of a fleet management program: failure to address issues at any level means lost revenue. For example, statistics show that a fleet program that is customized to your business typically reduces annual fuel costs by 15%¹.

Roll out of the program will be gradual, starting with fuel card availability. The ultimate goal in developing our new fleet management program is to offer our customers a program they can't get anywhere else: a relationship built on customized services from which they draw optimum value and peace of mind.

Customer Profile

Maco Paving Ltd.
Owner, Harry Martens

Maco Paving Ltd. has been providing commercial paving services in Calgary, Alberta for over 28 years. Their primary services include asphalt and concrete work, as well as sanding and snow removal.

This contractor's excellent reputation has been comfortable over the years, but the same can't be said for the staff! After 3 relocations, their final move in February 2010 settled them into their permanent location, a spacious new building on Wrangler Road in Rocky View County. The staff, which swells to about 70 in season, now enjoys a work environment well suited to the skilled and dedicated team that shows up every day.

Maco, a DRIVING FORCE customer since 2008, currently leases 6 vehicles and has purchased several used pickups. In the paving business, reliable vehicles are essential. When a truck breaks down, that means lost revenue—plain and simple.

"Since we started dealing with DRIVING FORCE, they've always done everything possible to get us what we want," says Calleen Crough, receptionist for over 20 years. Maco knows they can call their lease account manager (Robert Greek) anytime to address their vehicle needs.

Maco paves the road and DRIVING FORCE puts vehicles on it! We know that when DRIVING FORCE does a great job, the companies who buy and lease vehicles can concentrate on excelling at theirs.

Employee Profile

Claudette Larocque
Director, Marketing & Communications
DRIVING FORCE Corporate Office
Edmonton West

When you see DRIVING FORCE in the community, Claudette and her team have likely had a hand in it. Since joining the company in 2001, Claudette has contributed to marketing milestones such as the company's rebranding, AIR MILES partnership, 4 successful applications to Canada's 50 Best Managed Companies, and co-ordinating sponsorship for major events like the Honda Indy Edmonton.

"The best part of my job is the variety I get working with a diverse workforce and wide range of customers—no two days are the same," says Claudette. "My work is rewarding and produces tangible results."

These tangibles include internal and external communications to meet staff needs and promote the company. Claudette's team undertakes the writing, design and production of materials such as the employee newsletter, the customer bulletin and e-News bulletins. "Our team basically functions as an in-house ad agency," she says.

"The best part of my job is the variety I get working with a diverse workforce and wide range of customers—no two days are the same."

Promoting the company is one of the marketing department's primary objectives. For events, this means creating a presence to supplement supplied vehicles or other support. At the 2010 Honda Indy Edmonton, 4,200 DRIVING FORCE knapsacks were distributed. Merchandise distribution of this scale helps create familiarity in the community.

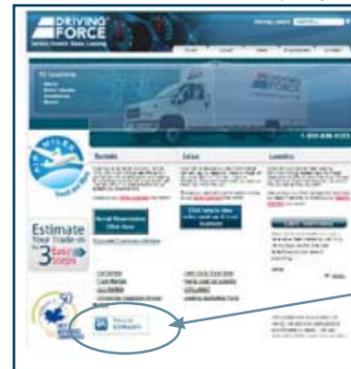

Claudette also knows the value of an online presence; it's just smart business to join the growing conversation. As such, she conducts media research and monitors trends such as social media and mobile marketing.

Conveying the company philosophy to new employees is another important part of her job. Knowledge of the company's corporate values ensures all staff can deliver on brand promises such as, "At DRIVING FORCE, we're driven to deliver... anything you want." In a nutshell, Claudette works toward the same goal as does every DRIVING FORCE employee—exceeding customers' expectations.
